The first tale, written by Joann Estoesta and Lisa Wahlander, is of Katara and Toph, who spend a day at the spa. The sage yet comedic Iroh's tale is next, written by Andrew Huebner; he helps various residents of Ba Sing Se, before making a tearful tribute to his son, who died in combat trying to conquer the city. Aang helps a zookeeper, though not without causing some trouble (written by Gary Scheppke). Sokka inadvertently enters a haiku contest (written by Lauren MacMullan). The generally brooding Zuko goes on a date (written by Katie Mattila). The last tale, written by Justin...

In Chinese custom, men carry the family name and the family's heritage after marriage. To ensure male heirs were produced, it was a common practice for an upper-class married man to have one or more concubines, provided he could support them. The custom could be invoked without the wife's consent: the husband's actions were protected by law. Concubines would co-exist in the family along with wives and children. A man might choose a courtesan or Gējī to be his concubine. Many of these courtesans would sing songs to attract potential husbands, hoping to become secondary wives. In the late Qing Dynasty, Geji culture declined and began to be replaced by high-class prostitutes. 0e64f9d673 == History == 0e64f9d673

Disney Sing-Along Songs Later volumes, as well as the two Christmas videos, do not feature a host at all. Professor Owl (now voiced by Corey Burton) hosts some of the videos, while either Jiminy Cricket or Ludwig Von Drake host others. Lyrics for the songs are sometimes displayed on-screen with the Mickey Mouse icon as a "bouncing ball". Scenes with Jiminy Cricket and Ludwig Von Drake were taken from television programs, including the Walt Disney anthology television series and The Mickey Mouse Club, which featured the characters in the 1950s and 1960s. At age three, he was taken in by the family of future Supreme Court of Nevada judge Thomas Porter Hawley. He married his wife Lee Sing in China and had two children with her, including a daughter born around 1910. According to Lee Sing, Tie Sing also went by the name Lim Wee Don, which he used when traveling to China for visits. Due to the Chinese Exclusion Act, Tie Sing never gained US citizenship and with the introduction of the Geary Act, he registered as a resident alien and his wife and his children had to remain in Hong Kong. Birth records were not widespread in Virginia City at the time of Tie Sing's birth and a fire had destroyed other records showing that he was born in the United States. 0e64f9d673 All SingStar and SingStore servers were shut down in January 2020.
