

Things Fall Apart Book

The album contains twelve compositions to the poems of Czesław Miłosz and his favourite poets: Anna Świrszczyńska, Jane Hirshfield and Denise Levertov. In October, 2011 EMI Music Poland published another version of the album, called Księga olśnień (which is the Polish translation of A Book of Luminous Things) with the same songs being performed in Polish. Apart from the language, the only difference between the two versions is in the song This Only (Polish: To jedno), which in the English version is performed by Aga Zaryan as sole vocalist, while in the Polish version she was joined by Grzegorz Turnau.

The song was written and composed in 1982 during the Escape tour. It is not certain exactly when it was first performed live. Some sources claim that the first live performance of the song was in 1982 at the Day on the Green concert, where singer Steve Perry told the crowd, "We just wrote this song about two weeks ago." However, bootleg recordings exist of performances at least a month earlier at Chicago's Rosemont Horizon, where Perry also says the song was two weeks old.

Deon, a skilled college running back, falls ill from a genetic disease just when he is about to go realize his dreams and advance to the NFL, a professional American Football league. Though idolized for his athletic ability, Deon shares the glory on and off of the football field. His mother Bee is incredibly proud and his younger brother Sean understandably jealous. Eric, Deon's stepfather, sees the football star as a winning lottery ticket. Deon's doctor, Dr. Brintall, informs him that he can't play football again, but there is always hope. While fighting cancer, Deon seeks to finish what he started. In the end, while at a catering party, he runs towards the football field just like the good old times and raises his arms, pretending that he has scored a touchdown.

It was later followed by No Longer at Ease in 1960 and Arrow of God in 1964, which together make up the "African trilogy". The novel's title was taken from a verse of "The Second Coming", a 1919 poem by Irish poet W. B. Yeats.

The festival evolved from Things Fall Apart Day, a commemoration of Chinua Achebe’s novel held annually since 2020. Conceived during a 2025 staff retreat at the Centre for Memories, it aimed to create a platform for literary creativity and dialogue on Igbo issues, according to executive director Iheanyi Igboko. Announced in May 2025, the festival was endorsed by the Association of Tourism Practitioners of Nigeria (ATPN) as a national tourism event and supported by Igwe Nnaemeka Alfred Ugochukwu Achebe, Obi of Onitsha.
