Twenty-One is an American game show originally hosted by Jack Barry that initially aired on NBC from September 12, 1956 to October 16, 1958. The 1994 film Quiz Show is based on these events. Produced by Jack Barry-Dan Enright Productions, the show featured two contestants playing against each other in separate isolation booths, answering general knowledge questions to earn 21 total points. The program became notorious when it was found to be rigged as part of the 1950s quiz show scandals, which nearly caused the demise of the entire genre in the wake of United States Senate investigations

Japan was in a strong position during the course of the war as the Allies were in a stalemate with the opposing Central Powers. The United Kingdom and Japan had been in a military alliance since 1902, and in 1914, the UK had asked Japan to enter the war. China published the secret demands, upsetting the Americans and British. They were sympathetic to Chinese protests and forced Japan to drop section 5 in the final 1916 settlement. Japan gained little in China and lost a great deal of prestige and... In 2009, the building won the Pacific Coast Builders Conference (PCBC)'s Gold Nugget Awards for the "attached housing project (for sale), high-rise eight stories and over" category. The building has a rooftop lounge and two outdoor chef's kitchens and fireplaces.

History

Background

The Han dynasty historian Sima Qian established many conventions of the genre, though its form was not standardized until much later. Starting with the Tang dynasty, each dynasty established an official office to write the history of its predecessor using official court records, partly in order to establish its own link to the earliest times. As fixed and edited in the Qing dynasty, the whole set contains 3,213 volumes and about 40 million words. It is considered one of the most important sources on Chinese history and culture.

Gameplay

Two contestants, typically a returning champion and a challenger, entered separate isolation booths and donned pairs of headphones. The arrangement of the booths and the studio lighting prevented the contestants from seeing or hearing each other or the audience. At any given moment during the game, one booth would be "open", meaning that the occupant could hear the host in the headphones and could speak using the booth's microphone. The other booth would be "closed", with its microphone...

Twenty-One Demands Japan would keep the former German leased territory it had conquered at the start of World War I in 1914 and would have increased influence in Manchuria and Inner Mongolia while having an expanded role in railways. The most extreme demands (in section 5) would give Japan a decisive voice in finance, policing, and government affairs: the latter would make China in effect a protectorate of Japan, and thereby reduce Western influence. The secret demands would greatly extend Japanese control of China. Holding On to You (Twenty One Pilots song) musical duo Twenty One Pilots from their second studio album Regional at Best (2011). The song contains lyrical elements of "Lean wit It, Rock wit It" by Dem Franchize Boyz. "Holding On to You" features upbeat rhythms and bouncy suspended chords over which Tyler Joseph delivers scattershot raps with down-to-earth sentiments and sings grandiose, euphoric choruses. "The song's lyrics express introspective lines as well as a sentiment about taking back control of one's own mind, lost to mental health. The track's indie-inspired synth-pop transforms from a sensitive ballad to a hip-hop number with rapped verses and codas. Lyrically, "Holding on to You" is an ode to self-control.
