However, that passage provides no specific format for what form legislation must have in order to be considered a "declaration of war" nor does the Constitution itself use this term. In the courts, the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, in Doe v. Bush, said: "[T]he text of the October Resolution itself spells out justifications for a war and frames itself as an 'authorization' of such a war," in effect saying that an authorization suffices for declaration and that what some may view as a formal congressional "Declaration of War" was not required by the Constitution. 4e3e1278b6
