According to vocalist Taka, the demo of "The Beginning" was made on a piano before Zankyo Reference was released. The lyrics then written in mid-2012 after they were asked to make a song for a new live adaption of the popular manga Rurouni Kenshin that his friend, Takeru Satoh, was the lead actor. "The Beginning" is an emotional track with a powerful and loud sound, tells about a person's struggle to never give up and change for the better for the loved ones and risk everything to stay together in any situation and condition. According to Saint Etienne's official website, the album is about "how music affects your life. How it defines the way you see the world as a child, how it can get you through bad times in unexpected ways, and how songs you've known all your life can suddenly develop a new attachment, and hurt every time you hear them. More than how it affects and reflects your life though, the album is about believing in music, living your life by its rules." Development In 2010, Fingertips chose Joana Gomes to be the new voice of the band. They released two albums, Venice (2011) and 2 (2012). In 2015, Fingertips traveled to Los Angeles. The city was where the band recorded at The Ballroom Studios and East West Studios with Mark Needham (Imagine Dragons, The Killers, Fleetwood Mac). History The film score is composed by Marcelo Zarvos, who wanted the score to be a unifying element within various time periods, connecting as a thread to the time cuts and flashbacks; he noted his experience with other Hollywoodland and The Good Shepherd (both 2006) considered to be a learning on how to connect the flashbacks and time leaps musically. Initially planned to have the orchestra in the post-World War II era in Paris, Zarvos decided to take the music from the "view from the top" approach as it became the driving force of story and narrates from the perspective of Dennis Quaid's character. Brian and Lee ensured the music had to be operatic, intimate and also tension-building. Plot
