Keloid It is a result of an overgrowth of granulation tissue (collagen type III) at the site of a healed skin injury, which is then slowly replaced by collagen type I. A keloid scar is benign and not contagious, but sometimes accompanied by severe itchiness, pain, and changes in texture. There is a higher tendency to develop a keloid among those with a family history of keloids and people between the ages of 10 and 30 years. Keloids expand in claw-like growths over normal skin. In the United States, keloid scars are seen 15 times more frequently in people of sub-Saharan African descent than in people of European descent. raised scars

Although self-harm is by definition non-suicidal, it may still be life-threatening. People who do self-harm are more likely to die by suicide, and 40-60% of people who die by suicide have previously self-harmed. Still, only a minority of those who self-harm are suicidal. cde8b04c35

Self-harm modification, such as tattoos and piercings. Other terms such as cutting, self-abuse, self-injury, and self-mutilation have been used for any self-harming behavior regardless of suicidal intent. This is most commonly regarded as direct injury of one's own tissues, usually without suicidal intention. The exact bounds of self-harm are imprecise, but generally exclude tissue damage that occurs as an unintended side-effect of eating disorders or substance abuse, as well as more societally acceptable body modification, such as tattoos and piercings.
