The Controller of Continuing Drama Series, Mal Young, commented the decision to increase the show's airtime was in response to viewer feedback. "We were receiving complaints when it was off air, so we've decided to give viewers more of what they want." The departure of several characters from the end of the previous series seemed bold but paved the way for new faces. Young stated "We've done everything possible with those characters and I wanted to move on." Watson added "We've said goodbye to five or six people and said hello to an equal number." The aim was to increase the pace of the series by creating more dynamic character storylines to avoid it from becoming repetitive. 2afc0dcc15 These items were gathered from published sources documenting 1920s slang, including books, PDFs, and websites. The New York Post, the Miami New Times, Complex, and the Orange County Register named it among the worst shows of the 2012–13 season. The A.V. Club wrote in its review, "Family comedies have become classics and thrived based on similarly simple ideas ... like blended families and differing socioeconomic backgrounds, but at least those shows were funny. 1600 Penn is not." Variety commented that the show's "uneven execution should leave viewers feeling as divided as the country." Tim Surette of TV.com wrote that show co-creator and star Josh Gad's performance "is so grating that he should be used in the War on Terror to flush out evildoers."
