In 2016 the diagnostic criteria for hEDS were re-written to be more restrictive, with the intent of narrowing the pool of hEDS patients, in the hope of making it easier to identify a common genetic mutation and create a diagnostic DNA test.

Arthur Joyce Lunel Cary was born in 1888 in his grandparents' home, which was above the Belfast Bank on Shipquay Street in Derry in Ulster, the Northern province in Ireland. His family had been 'Planter' landlords in neighbouring Inishowen, a peninsula on the north coast of County Donegal, also in Ulster, since the early years of the Plantation of Ulster in the early seventeenth century. However, the family had largely lost its Inishowen property on the western shores of Lough Foyle after the passage of the Irish Land Act in 1882. The family dispersed and Cary had uncles who served in the frontier US Cavalry and the Canadian North-West Mounted Police. Most of the Carys wound up in Great Britain. Hypermobile joints are common and occur in about 10 to 25% of the population. Most have no other issues. In a minority of people, pain and other symptoms are present. This may be a sign of hypermobility spectrum disorder (HSD). In some cases, hypermobile joints are a feature of connective tissue disorders. One of these, Ehlers-Danlos Syndrome, was classified into several types which have been found to be genetic.

Hypermobile Ehlers-Danlos syndrome (hEDS), formerly called EDS Type 3, remains the only EDS variant without a diagnostic DNA test. 1af1ae495f Lenore LaFount was born in Logan, Utah, and raised in Salt Lake City. The knee is a modified hinge joint, a type of synovial joint, which is composed of three functional compartments: the patellofemoral articulation, consisting of the patella, or "kneecap", and the patellar groove on the front of the femur through which it slides; and the medial and lateral tibiofemoral articulations linking the femur, or thigh bone, with the tibia, the main bone of the lower leg.
