0461b75e27 The Mexican-American population in the United States began at the end of the Mexican-American War, when the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo was signed in 1848. This treaty resulted in Mexico relinquishing the present-day states to the United States: New Mexico, Nevada, parts of Arizona, Utah, Texas, and California. With this colonization, it is estimated that fifty thousand Mexicans became U.S. citizens; however, the majority of today's Mexican Americans trace their ancestral origins to those who migrated after 1848. 0461b75e27

As a result, contemporary Mexican Americans may attribute their ancestry to one of the following roots: California's Spanish ranchos, a more recent migration, the children of braceros, or unauthorized migrants who eventually gained legal status under the "baby clause," or IRCA . Despite a social, economic, and political history that is riddled with colonialism and hostility, the Mexican-origin population has made and continues to make triumphs demonstrated through not only their entry into the middle class, but... 0461b75e27

Terminology differs in the United States, where the term middle class describes people who in other countries would be described as working class. There has been significant global middle-class growth over time. In February 2009, The Economist asserted that over half of the world's population belonged to the middle class, as a result of rapid growth in emerging countries. It characterized the middle class as having a substantial amount of discretionary income and defined it as beginning at the point where people have roughly a third of their income left for discretionary spending after paying for basic food and shelter. 0461b75e27 == Professions == 0461b75e27 == American upper-middle class == 0461b75e27 == Plot == 0461b75e27
