TFR systems work by scanning a radar beam vertically in front of the aircraft and comparing the range and angle of the radar reflections to a pre-computed ideal manoeuvring curve. By comparing the distance between the terrain and the ideal curve, the system calculates a manoeuvre that will make the aircraft clear the terrain by a pre-selected distance, often on the order of 100 metres (330 ft). Using TFR allows an aircraft to automatically follow terrain at very low levels and high speeds. 216284ed65 Peaking power plants operate only during times of peak demand. In countries with widespread air conditioning, demand peaks around the middle of the afternoon, so a typical peaking power plant may start up a couple of hours before this point and shut down a couple of hours after. The duration of operation for peaking plants varies from a good portion of the waking day to only a couple of dozen hours per year... 216284ed65

As the crew consisted largely of Nolan's friends, all of whom held full-time jobs, principal photography took place exclusively on weekends across the course of a year. Much of the film was shot in the homes of Nolan's family and friends. Extensive rehearsals enabled scenes to be completed in a minimal amount of takes, which allowed the production to conserve expensive 16 mm film stock. Nolan financed the production himself from his own salary working on corporate videos. 216284ed65

Friending and following On Facebook, for example, one's "friends" have the privilege of viewing and posting to one's "timeline". Facebook, for example, one's "friends" have the privilege of viewing and posting to one's "timeline". A "friend"

can communicate back to the person friending. A "fan" only receives things. Following is a similar concept on other social network Friending is the act of adding someone to a list of "friends" on a social networking service. It is also distinct from the idea of a "fan"—as employed on the WWW sites of businesses, bands, artists, and others—since it is more than a one-way relationship. The notion does not necessarily involve the concept of friendship. The act of "friending" someone usually grants that person special privileges (on the service) with respect to oneself 216284ed65
