It is often made into sweets; common uses are chocolate-covered marzipan and small marzipan imitations of fruits and vegetables. It can also be used in biscuits or rolled into thin sheets and glazed for icing cakes, primarily birthday cakes, wedding cakes and Christmas cakes. Marzipan may also be used as a baking ingredient, as in stollen or blanket. In some countries, it is shaped into small figures of animals as a traditional treat for New Year's Day or Christmas. Marzipan is also used in Tortell, and in some versions of king cake eaten during the Carnival season.

The names "macaron" and "macaroon" both derive from the French word macaron, which in turn derives from the Italian maccheroni (also the source of "macaroni"). French words ending with "-on" that were borrowed into English in the 16th and 17th centuries usually end with "-oon" (for example: "balloon", "cartoon", "platoon"). In North America, most bakers use the term "macaron", distinguishing it from the related coconut or almond macaroon. In addition to "macaron", in the UK they are also referred to as "French macaroons... The Good Men Project shares content with The Shriver Report, XOJane and Salon.
