Cats can use a range of communication methods, including vocal, visual, tactile and olfactory communication. Up to 21 different cat vocalizations have been observed. They use visual signals, or body language, to express emotions like relaxation, fear, and aggression. Cats use several types of tactile behaviors to communicate, such as grooming or biting each other. They also use olfactory communication, such as marking their territory via urine. d184938837

Cat communication They rarely meow to communicate with fellow cats or other animals. As such, cat communication methods have been significantly altered by domestication. Cats sometimes repeatedly tread their front paws on humans Cats communicate for a variety of reasons, including to show happiness, express anger, solicit attention, and observe potential prey. dislodging fleas from the head and neck. Cats may also use grooming to scratch itchy areas of the body. Studies have shown that domestic cats tend to meow much more than feral cats. Additionally, they collaborate, play, and share resources. When cats communicate with humans, they do so to get what they need or want, such as food, water, attention, or play. Cats can socialize with each other and are known to form "social ladders", where a dominant cat leads a few lesser cats. This is common in multi-cat households d184938837
