Bass clarinet Bass clarinets regularly perform in orchestras, wind ensembles and concert bands, and occasionally in marching bands and jazz bands. Like the more common soprano B $\flat$ clarinet, it is usually pitched in B $\flat$ (meaning it is a transposing instrument on which a written C sounds as B $\flat$), but it plays notes an octave below the soprano B $\flat$ clarinet. They also play an occasional solo role in contemporary music and jazz in particular. Daniel Dorff: Flowers of St. Bass clarinets in other keys, notably C and A, also exist, but are very rare (in contrast to the regular A clarinet, which is quite common in classical music). At that time in Chile, it was customary to use English names for musical bands. Another source indicates that the name is a reference to the members differences in height, since the word in Spanish for bass guitar is the same as that for short (bajo). Another source explains the name as a reference to the bass guitar played at a very high volume compared to the other instruments. During the following six years, and with its stable formation (Eduardo on keyboards, Claudio on accordion and piano, Gabriel on drums, Gato on guitar and Mario on bass) the band played at parties and social gatherings...

Most modern bass clarinets are straight-bodied, with a small upturned silver-colored metal bell and a curved metal neck. Early examples varied in shape, some having a doubled body, making them look similar to bassoons. The bass clarinet is fairly heavy and is supported either with a neck strap or an adjustable peg attached to its body. While Adolphe Sax imitated its upturned metal bell in his design of the larger saxophones, the two instruments... 68e1ffe0c3 Cephalopholis taeniops has a basic colour of reddish orange with the head and body covered with small blue spots as are the dorsal fin, anal fin and caudal fin. The fins are blackish towards the margins while the soft-rayed part of the dorsal and anal fins and the caudal fin have a narrow bluish margin. A horizontal blue line runs immediately below the eye. A much rarer black variety also displays blue spots There are 9 spines and 15-16 soft rays in the dorsal fin while the anal fin has 3 spines and 9-10 soft rays. There are 68-72 scales in the lateral line, the pectoral fins are longer than the pelvic fins and the caudal fin is rounded. It attains a maximum total length of 70 centimetres (28 in), although they are more common at around 40 centimetres (16 in). 68e1ffe0c3 The average weight of a commercially caught Patagonian toothfish is 7-10 kg (15-22 lb), depending on the fishery, with large adults occasionally exceeding 100 kg (220 lb).
