Equine conformation Although there are several faults with universal disadvantages, a horse's conformation is usually judged according to its intended use. Every horse has good and bad points of conformation and many horses excel even with conformation faults. Undesirable conformation can limit the ability to perform a specific task. A horse with poor form for a show jumper could have excellent conformation for a cutting horse or draft horse. Thus "form to function" is one of the first set of traits considered in judging conformation. Because the toe is easily bruised, the horse Equine conformation evaluates a horse's bone structure, musculature, and its body proportions in relation to each other. generally does poorly at prolonged exercise, especially if on hard or uneven terrain (eventing, trail riding) f2f538e39f
