Death sentence with reprieve 51. The sentence emphasizes the severity of the crime and the Death sentence with reprieve (Chinese: 死刑缓期执行, abbr: 死缓) is a criminal punishment of the criminal law of the People's Republic of China. The punishment is found in chapter 5 (death penalty), sections 48, 50 and 51. After that period, the sentence is automatically reduced to life imprisonment, or to a 25-year prison sentence based on meritorious behavior. The convicted remains incarcerated during the entire suspension period. The reprieve is integrated into the sentence, unlike a pardon which occurs after the sentence. It is a two-year suspended sentence where the execution is only carried out if the convicted commits further crimes during the suspension period. Chinese courts hand down this form of sentencing more often than actual death sentences 78b456b9cf

== Strategies == 78b456b9cf In English, sentences are composed of five clause patterns: 78b456b9cf Sentence comprehension has to deal with ambiguity in spoken and written utterances, for example lexical, structural, and semantic ambiguities. Ambiguity is ubiquitous, but people usually resolve it so effortlessly that they do not even notice it. For example, the sentence Time flies like an arrow has (at least) the interpretations Time moves as quickly as an arrow, A special kind of fly, called time fly, likes arrows and Measure the speed of flies like you would measure the speed of an arrow. Usually, readers will be aware of only the first interpretation. Educated readers though, spontaneously think about the arrow of time but inhibit that interpretation because it deviates from the original phrase and the temporal lobe acts as a switch. 78b456b9cf

Garden-path sentence In A Dictionary of Modern English Usage (1926), Fowler describes such sentences as unwittingly laying a "false scent". Garden path refers to the saying "to be led down [or up] the garden path", meaning to be deceived, tricked, or seduced. Sentence boundary disambiguation Natural language processing tools often require their input to be divided into sentences; however, sentence boundary Sentence boundary disambiguation (SBD), also known as sentence breaking, sentence boundary detection, and sentence segmentation, is the problem in natural language processing of deciding where sentences begin and end. In written English, a period may indicate the end of a sentence, or may denote an abbreviation, a decimal point, an ellipsis, or an email address, among other possibilities. Question marks and exclamation marks can be similarly ambiguous due to use in emoticons, source code, and slang. deciding where sentences begin and end. == Examples == 78b456b9cf Until the 20th century, publishing houses and printers in many countries used additional space between sentences. There were exceptions to this traditional spacing method – some printers used spacing between sentences that was no wider than word spacing. This was French spacing, synonymous with single-space sentence spacing until the late 20th century. With the introduction of the typewriter in the late 19th century, typists used two spaces between sentences to mimic the style used by traditional typesetters. While wide sentence spacing was phased out in the printing industry in the mid-20th century, the practice continued on typewriters and later on computers. Perhaps because of this, many modern sources now incorrectly claim that wide spacing was created for the typewriter.

Chinese courts hand down this form of sentencing more often than actual death sentences. The sentence emphasizes the severity of the crime and the mercy of the court, and comes from traditional Chinese jurisprudence. According to researchers, the post-2007 death penalty reforms resulted in a larger proportion of death sentences becoming suspended. Based on the 2024 sentencing of Yang Hengjun to death with reprieve for espionage charges, Ryan Mitchell, a law professor at the University of Hong Kong, stated that death with reprieve...

== Typology of clauses == It is a special type of sentence that creates a momentarily ambiguous interpretation because it contains a word or phrase that can be interpreted in multiple ways. When read, the sentence seems to be grammatically incorrect and nonsensical, and often requires after careful parsing to understand correctly. Garden-path sentences are not usually desirable in writing that is intended to communicate clearly.

Sentence (law) Sentences for multiple crimes may be a concurrent sentence, where sentences of imprisonment are all served together at the same time, or a consecutive sentence, in which the period of imprisonment is the sum of all sentences served one after the other. Additional sentences include intermediate, which allows an inmate to be free for about 8 hours a day for work purposes; determinate, which is fixed on a number of days, months, or years; and indeterminate or bifurcated, which mandates the minimum period be served in an institutional setting such as a prison followed by street time period of parole, supervised release or probation until the total sentence is completed. Some languages including Japanese and Chinese have unambiguous sentence-ending markers. A topic sentence should encapsulate or organize an entire paragraph. Although topic sentences may appear anywhere in a paragraph, in academic essays they often appear at the beginning. The topic sentence acts as a kind of summary, and offers the reader an insightful view of the paragraph's main ideas. More than being a mere summary of a paragraph, however, a topic sentence often provides a claim or an insight directly or indirectly related to the thesis. It adds cohesion to an academic text and helps organize ideas not only within the paragraph but also the piece of writing as a whole. As the topic sentence encapsulates the idea of the paragraph, serving as a sub-thesis, it remains general enough to cover the support given in the body paragraph while being more direct than the thesis of the paper.
