Laninamivir was approved for influenza treatment in Japan in 2010 and for prophylaxis in 2013. It is currently marketed under the name Inavir by Daiichi Sankyo. Biota Pharmaceuticals and Daiichi Sankyo co-own Laninamivir. On 1 April 2011, BARDA awarded up to an estimated US$231m to Biota Pharmaceuticals (Formerly Biota Holdings Ltd) wholly owned subsidiary, Biota Scientific Management Pty Ltd, for the advanced development of Laninamivir in the US. It is under clinical evaluations in other countries. Daiichi Sankyo Europe, GmbH (DSE), the European subsidiary, is headquartered in Munich, Germany. The organization is responsible for development and manufacturing for 12 European countries. As the head of Ranbaxy, Singh oversaw both a massively fraudulent operation aimed at deceiving the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and other international health organisations as to the quality of the company's generic drug products, as well as the deception of the company's buyers when he mediated its sale to the Japanese drugmaker Daiichi Sankyo, in 2008. Singh, who had been kept on as CEO by the purchasing company, resigned in 2009, as the deceit became apparent and as Ranbaxy began posting losses due to FDA-imposed restrictions on its products. In 2008, Japanese pharmaceutical company Daiichi Sankyo acquired a controlling share in Ranbaxy and in 2014, Sun Pharma acquired 100% of Ranbaxy in an all-stock deal. The Sun Pharma acquisition brought all new management to Ranbaxy, which had been laden with controversy (see: § Controversies, below). Sun is the world's fifth largest specialty generic pharmaceutical company. == History == Malvinder Mohan Singh is the grandson of Bhai Mohan Singh, who bought Ranbaxy Laboratories from its original founders in 1952.
