Concrete degradation Chemical damage is caused by the formation of expansive products produced by chemical reactions (from carbonatation, chlorides, sulfates and distillate water), by aggressive chemical species present in groundwater and seawater (chlorides, sulfates, magnesium ions), or by microorganisms (bacteria, fungi. Concrete stitching employs metal staples or stitches to restore structural integrity to cracked concrete surfaces Concrete degradation may have many different causes. Concrete is mostly damaged by the corrosion of reinforcement bars, the carbonation of hardened cement paste or chloride attack under wet conditions. to be fully load bearing or simply cosmetic.) The most destructive agent of concrete structures and components is probably water. Indeed, water often directly participates in chemical reactions as a reagent and is always necessary as a solvent, or a reacting medium, making transport of solutes and reactions possible. Without water, many harmful reactions cannot progress, or are so slow that their harmful consequences become negligible during the planned service life of the construction... 503dcabe09 In the modern day, a child named Nick flees his home with a bag full of methamphetamine. Cross-stitch This form of cross-stitch is also called counted cross-stitch in order to distinguish it from other forms of cross-stitch. Cross-stitch is a form of sewing and a popular form of counted-thread embroidery in which X-shaped stitches (called cross stitches) in a tiled, raster-like pattern are used to form a picture. Sometimes cross-stitch is done on designs printed on the fabric (stamped cross-stitch); the stitcher simply stitches over the printed pattern. Cross-stitch is often executed on easily countable fabric called aida cloth, whose weave creates a plainly visible grid of squares with holes for the needle at each corner. The stitcher counts the threads on a piece of evenweave fabric (such as linen) in each direction so that the stitches are of uniform size and appearance

Glossary of textile manufacturing The machine used for weaving is the loom. Needlework The manufacture of textiles is one of the oldest of human technologies. Plain stitches, known as Tent stitches, may be worked as basketweave or half cross, with a single orientation, or fancy, such as Bargello. For more information of the various steps, see textile manufacturing. For decoration, the process of coloring yarn or the finished material is dyeing. To make textiles, the first requirement is a source of fiber from which a yarn can be made, primarily by spinning. The yarn is processed by knitting or weaving, with color and patterns, which turns it into cloth

== Synopsis == Fabrics used in cross-stitch include linen, aida cloth, and mixed-content fabrics called 'evenweave' such as jobelan and lugana. All cross-stitch fabrics are technically "evenweave" as the term refers to the fact that the fabric is woven to make sure that there are the same number of threads per inch in both the warp and the weft (i.e. vertically and horizontally). Fabrics are categorized by threads per inch (referred... With a brief
