 Body odor Body odor has a strong genetic basis, but it can also be strongly influenced by various factors, such as sex, diet, health, and medication. It is present in all animals, and its intensity can be influenced by many factors (behavioral patterns, survival strategies). Bathing daily with antibacterial soap reduces the amount of bacteria found on the skin. Shaving armpit hair allows for sweat to evaporate Body odor or body odour (BO) is the unique odor secreted by an animal or produced by microorganisms on an animal's outermost surfaces. The body odor of human males plays an important role in human sexual attraction as a powerful indicator of genetic variation (MHC/HLA heterozygosity); significant evidence suggests that women are attracted to men whose body odor is different from theirs, indicating that they have immune genes that are different from their own, which may produce healthier offspring. in the body eb23549657

A subclass of deodorants called antiperspirants prevents sweating itself, typically by blocking sweat glands. There are two types of deodorant; aerosol (spray) and stick. Antiperspirants are used on a wider range of body parts at any place where sweat would be inconvenient or unsafe. Other types of deodorant allow sweating but prevent bacterial action on sweat eb23549657

== Overview == eb23549657 The first commercial deodorant was introduced and patented in the late nineteenth century by Edna Murphey, an inventor in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The product was briefly withdrawn from the market in the US. The modern formulation of the antiperspirant was patented by Jules Montenier on January 28, 1941. This formulation was first found in "Stopette" deodorant spray, which Time magazine called "the best-selling deodorant of the early 1950s." eb23549657 Deodorant has been linked to breast cancer in the media, but there has not been any reliable data found that deodorant causes cancer. eb23549657
