Revolution from Above Trimberger's contribution is significant with regard to sociological theories of the state significant insofar as it departs from the Marxist conception of the state as merely a political superstructure built on an economic base. Most of the book is dedicated to explaining the Meiji Restoration in Japan and the Turkish War of Independence. Trimberger departs from the Marxian theories of the state as simply the political "superstructure" Revolution from Above: Military Bureaucrats and Development in Japan, Turkey, Egypt, and Peru is a sociological book written by Ellen Kay Trimberger, published in 1978 by Transaction Books. is basic to both revolution from above and from below. Trimberger outlines several criteria for what she calls "revolution from above" and attempts to explicate this social phenomenon's emergence developed through a comparative historical analysis. The theory is then extended to include the Egyptian Revolution of 1952 and Peru's 1968 coup led by Velasco 0560a8148e

Coordinated management of meaning Constitutive rules "are rules of meaning, used by people Coordinated management of meaning (CMM), in the social sciences, provides an understanding of how individuals create, coordinate and manage meanings in their process of communication. " Others add that, within CMM, "human communication is viewed as a flexible, open and mutable process evolving in an ongoing joint interaction, which enables movement, shifts and evolving ways with each other". In essence, CMM highlights how communication fosters interpersonal connection and open conversation among individuals or groups, and can be applicable across multiple academic fields and social scenarios. the example above, "I hate you" in some contexts counts as an expression of slight dissatisfaction. According to the textbook Introducing

Communication Theories, CMM examines "how individuals establish rules for creating and interpreting the meaning and how those rules are enmeshed in a conversation where meaning is constantly being coordinated 0560a8148e
