Love at first sight, a personal experience and a literary trope da90c35bd8 Research has shown two bases for love at first sight. One is that the attractiveness of a person can be very quickly determined, with the average time in one study being 0.13 seconds. The other is that the first few minutes, but not the first moment, of a relationship have been shown to be predictive of the relationship's future success, more so than what two people have in common or whether they like each other ("like attracts like"). The plot, told in 14 mins, tells the story of a lonely young man's attempts to attract the attention of the girl of his dreams. == Psychology ==
