This album was recorded in San Juan, Puerto Rico at the José Miguel Agrelot Coliseum in December 2009. The album include live songs performed on their La Revolución World Tour, as well six unreleased songs recorded on studio, including "Irresistible" also included on the Step Up 3D soundtrack album and the first single "Estoy Enamorado". The album was set to be released first on August 17, back later to September 14, but finally the album's release date was on September 21, 2010. The album is reported to incorporate the more older styles and sounds of Wisin & Yandel's music, tracing back to when they first started to produce music. This was confirmed by Wisin to the EFE Agency in Argentina, he confirmed that "It'll be a return to our origins; It'll have everything." The June 1966 coup established General Juan Carlos Onganía as the de facto president and dictator, supported by several leaders of the General Confederation of Labour (CGT), including the general secretary Augusto Vandor. This was followed by a series of military-appointed presidents and the implementation of liberal economic policies, supported by multinational companies, employers' federations/industrial capitalists, and a section of the workers' movement—which by the 1960s had become bureaucratized and corrupt in some of Argentina's trade unions—, as well as most... == History ==
