Cat communication evidence that grooming in cats is effective in dislodging fleas from the head and neck. They rarely meow to communicate with fellow cats or other animals. Additionally, they collaborate, play, and share resources. Cats can socialize with each other and are known to form "social ladders", where a dominant cat leads a few lesser cats. Cats may also use grooming to scratch itchy areas of the body. As such, cat communication methods have been significantly altered by domestication. When cats communicate with humans, they do so to get what they need or want, such as food, water, attention, or play. This is common in multi-cat households. Studies have shown that domestic cats tend to meow much more than feral cats. Cats sometimes Cats communicate for a variety of reasons, including to show happiness, express anger, solicit attention, and observe potential prey 79a8b54abd
