One of Magritte's most common artistic devices was the use of objects to hide what lies behind them. For example, in The Son of Man (1964) an apple hides the face of a man wearing a bowler hat, and in The Pleasure Principle (1937) a bright flash likewise obscures a face. In The Human Condition, the cover-up appears in the form of a painting within a painting. 15277bdccc

Mathematically, the strength of this "regression" effect is dependent on whether or not all of the random variables are drawn from the same distribution, or if there are genuine differences in the underlying distributions for each random variable. In the first case, the "regression" effect is statistically likely to occur, but in the second case, it may occur less strongly or not at all. 15277bdccc Regression toward the mean is thus a useful concept to consider when designing any scientific experiment, data analysis, or test, which intentionally selects the most extreme events - it indicates that follow-up checks may be useful... 15277bdccc Magritte had this to say of his 1933 work: 15277bdccc

Human science Underlying human science. Human science aims to expand the understanding of the human world through a broad interdisciplinary approach. Human science is an objective, informed critique of human existence and how it relates to reality. It is the study of human phenomena. It encompasses a wide range of fields - including history, philosophy, sociology, psychology, justice studies, evolutionary biology, biochemistry, neurosciences, folkloristics, and anthropology. It requires evaluating and interpreting the historical human experience and analyzing current human activity to understand human phenomena and to outline human evolution. the human sciences integrate an understanding of human structure, function, and adaptation with a broader exploration of what it means to be human. It is the study and interpretation of the experiences, activities, constructs, and artifacts associated with human beings. The study of the human experience is both historical and current. The study of human sciences attempts to expand and enlighten the human being's knowledge of its existence, its interrelationship with other species and systems, and the development of artifacts to perpetuate the human expression and thought. The Human science (or human sciences in the plural) studies the philosophical, biological, social, justice, and cultural aspects of human life 15277bdccc
